CALL FOR PAPERS

The rapid developments in technology that are affecting almost all sectors of social and economic life are also leading to extensive and profound changes in the world we live in. These rapid technological advances continue to impact many facets of our life and sometimes unleash disruptive change.

The disruptive force of technology and AI nowadays can impact the economic growth, business models, patterns of employment, and inequality, by creating new markets and business practices, needs for new product infrastructure, and different labor skills by employees.

No one is immune to a world that is rapidly transforming, due to the impact of technology, but the main challenge remains to keep the pace and to be competitive and productive in the worlds’ evolving technological landscape in regard of adding value to national economy, businesses, and society in which we are a part.

In the context of rapid technological and digital transformations, it is important to conduct studies and understand the complex challenges and opportunities presented by this “new” revolution caused by technological advances, to cope with them as best as possible. Therefore, the call for papers in the first international conference held by Tirana Business University aims to get better insights from professors, lecturers, and scientific researchers (foreign and Albanian ones) regarding the different ways technological advances are impacting and transforming economic growth, business models, patterns of employment, social relations, and inequality in the world we live in.
